The corporate slogan was certainly true once upon a time in the 1940s, when the original military-based Jeep really was the only game in 4x4 off-road town. But in the 21st century the game is a bit more crowded and a lot more sophisticated, and Jeep knows it. It's one thing being a legend (which Jeep is); it's another thing keeping up with the market (which Jeep must). And the market has changed a lot since the original Cherokee was launched - amazingly eighteen years ago, into a different world. The old Cherokee's sharp-edged boxiness was old-fashioned but it had almost become timeless. This New model looks distinctive and refreshed. It may be an American legend, but is Jeep's smart new Cherokee still the real McCoy? A resounding YES from the automotive press... ! Smooth interior is light years ahead of its predecessor: plusher, better quality, better designed. It's also spacious and well-equipped. Then, in Jeep's native America in particular (which was where the Cherokee was mainly aimed), ruggedness and off-road ability still weighed heavier on the scales than luxury and on-road comfort. So although the 'compact' Cherokee started life as a more up-market, multi-purpose offering than its more spartan siblings, it still made a major play of being able to cut it when the going got rough. Then when it came to Europe it started to mellow a bit more, and beyond the underlying ruggedness you could have leather and air-con, and on-road driving characteristics that gave at least a first generation 'car-like' feel. And now the NEW jeep was born - and what a lovely 4x4 she is too..... enjoy !
